Surveillance

Internet filtering is a subset of surveillance

If they are censoring something they are surveilling everything

Censorship

It's a human rights issue

It's a non democratic form of oppression on people

It allows those in power to subvert reality

Filternet

What we are doing?

Allow people to circumvent censorship (bridges)

Allow people to speak freely and anonymously (Tor Hidden Services)

Measure internet filtering in the world (OONI-probe)

OONI

Open Observatory of Network Interference

Methodology and Framework for detecting censorship

Make all data and code publicly available

Goals

Detect

Network Filtering (Is my network being intercepted (DPI))

Network Tampering (Is somebody playing with my packets?)

Content Blocking (What is being blocked?)

Filtering technique (How are they blocking me?) - Filtering software/hardware (Who is the vendor and software version of this device?)

Why?

Existing tools are:

Closed source

Closed methodologies

Closed data

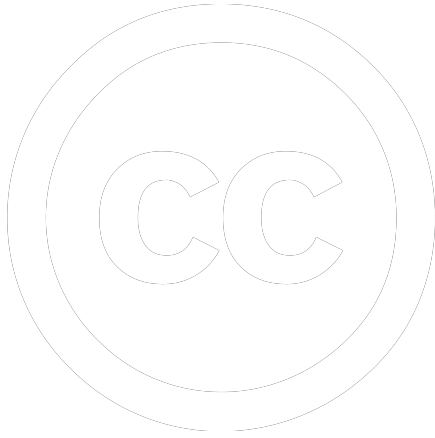

We aim at making:

An FLOSS tool

using Open Methodologies

publish all data with open license

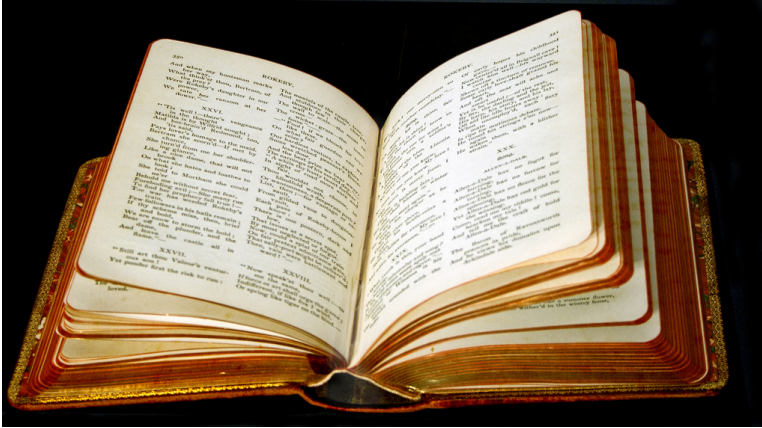

Open Data

Allows the results to be independently verified

People can draw their own conclusions on the data

Open Methodologies

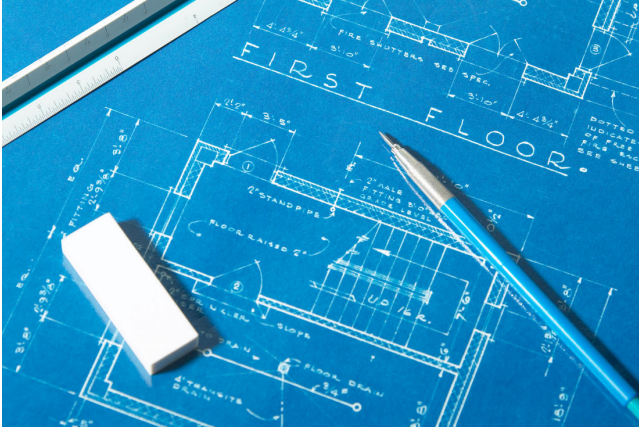

Allows us to do proper science!

Implementation

Based on twisted and scapy
Is currently a prototype
